Morse Code is a type of communication. It is most widely used today by amateur radio operators, but is still sometimes used to try to get help when someone is lost. Some people even use it on text messages because they think it is faster than typing in the text! Let's use some Morse Code to decode the words below. This is International Morse Code and not the old American Morse Code, since International is used more today.

Do you like to watch rabbits? Rabbits can really hop far. We are going to do an activity where the hopping rabbit will help us to find the letters we need.

For each row of letters below, the instructions will tell you how many letters the rabbit has to jump over to get to the next letter of the word. If you jump over the right number of letters, each letter you write down will help you spell the spelling word.

For example, if the spelling word is many, the activity would look like this:

r	w	m	s	t	a	d	u	n	p	c	y
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

Jump over two letters.

You would jump over the first two letters and write down the "m". Jump over the next two letters and use the "a". Jump over two letters and use the "n". Jump over the next two letters and use the "y". Your word would be many. Now it's your turn!

d	h	i	a	f	r	l	b	h	o	k	r
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

Jump over one letter.
