

Moscow is the largest city in Russia and the nation's capital. It is home to many famous buildings such as the Kremlin and St. Basil's Cathedral. Moscow sits in the western part of Russia in Europe.

Moscow is the largest city in Russia and the nation's capital. It is home to many famous buildings such as the Kremlin and St. Basil's Cathedral. Moscow sits in the western part of Russia in Europe.

St. Petersburg is Russia's second-largest city. It is about 400 miles northwest of Moscow and not very far from the Arctic Circle! Many important events have happened in St. Petersburg, including a major battle in World War II.

St. Petersburg is Russia's second-largest city.

It is about 400 miles northwest of Moscow and not very far from the Arctic Circle!

Many important events have happened in St.
Petersburg, including a major battle in World War II.

Novosibirsk or “New Siberia” is the largest city in Siberia. It sits where the Trans-Siberian Railroad crosses the Ob River. Many large machines are built in Novosibirsk, including military planes, farm equipment, mining tools, and more.

Novosibirsk or “New Siberia” is the largest city in Siberia. It sits where the Trans-Siberian Railroad crosses the Ob River. Many large machines are built in Novosibirsk, including military planes, farm equipment, mining tools, and more.