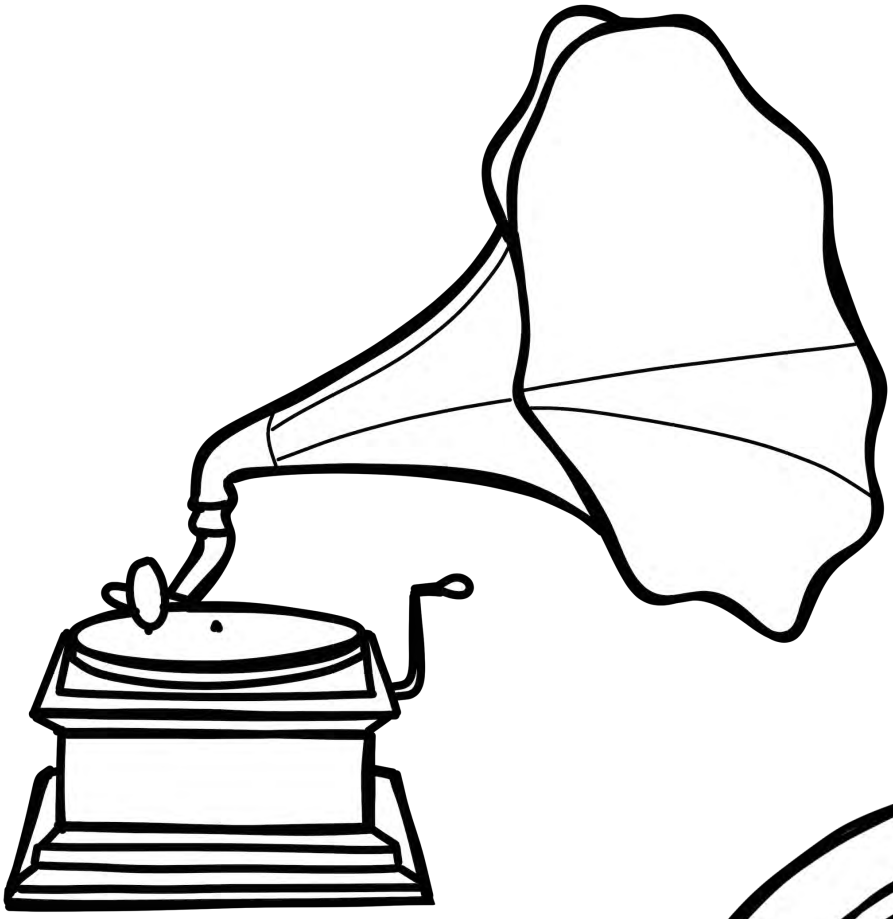
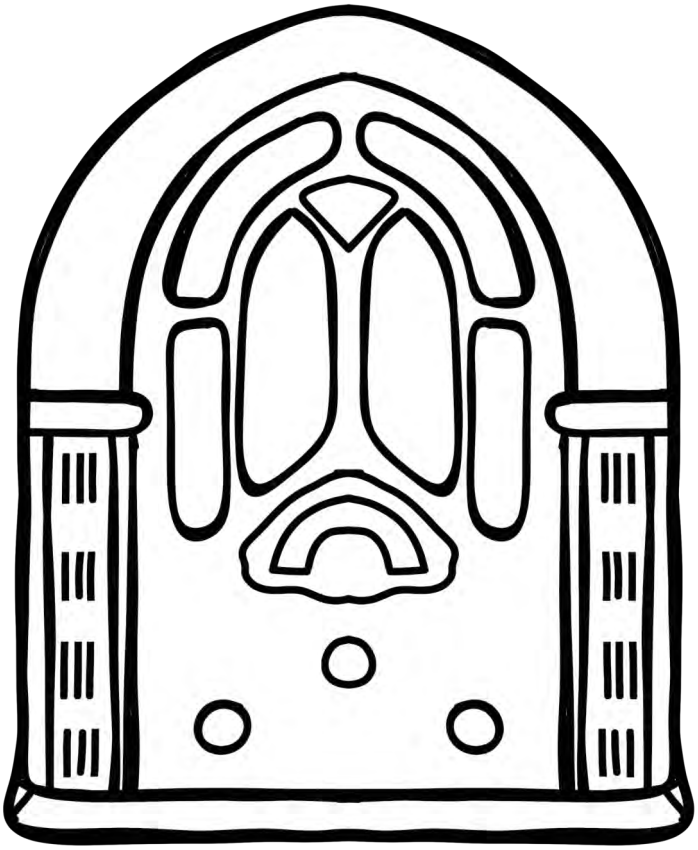
People in the 1920s

©Bonnie Rose Hudson www.writebonnierose.com

In the 1920s, some dancers were called flappers, an important person was the "big cheese," and G-men worked for the FBI.





Phonograph and radio

You might have seen the Hollywood sign being built in 1923. . .

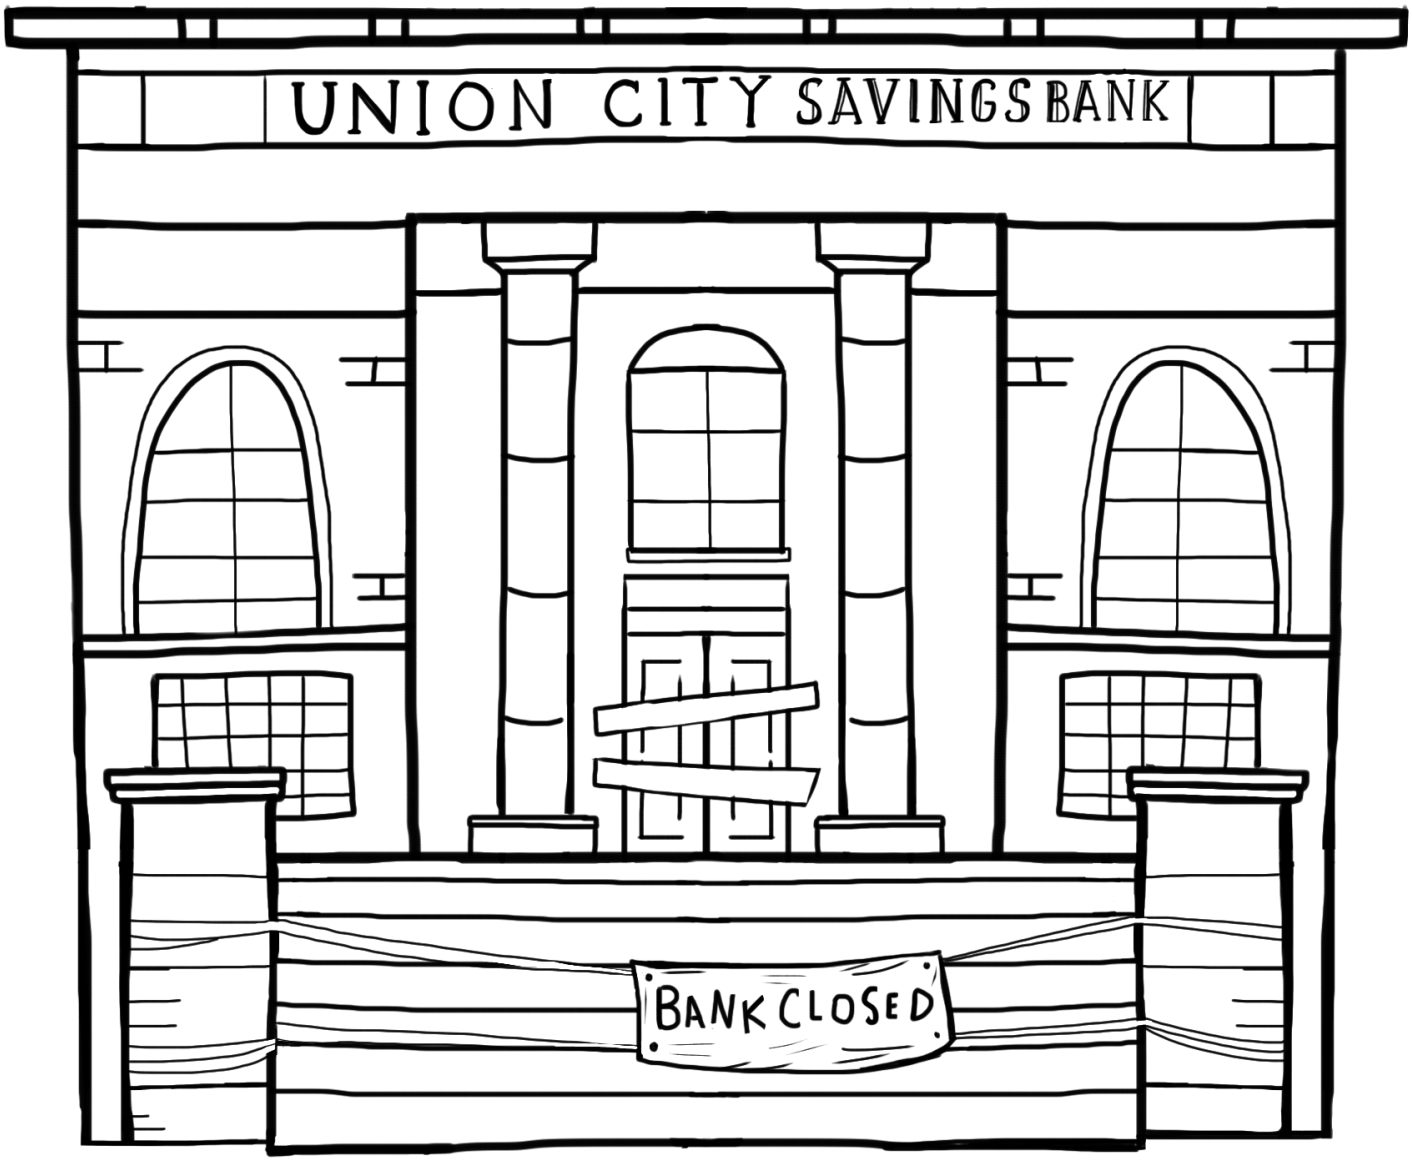
George Gershwin

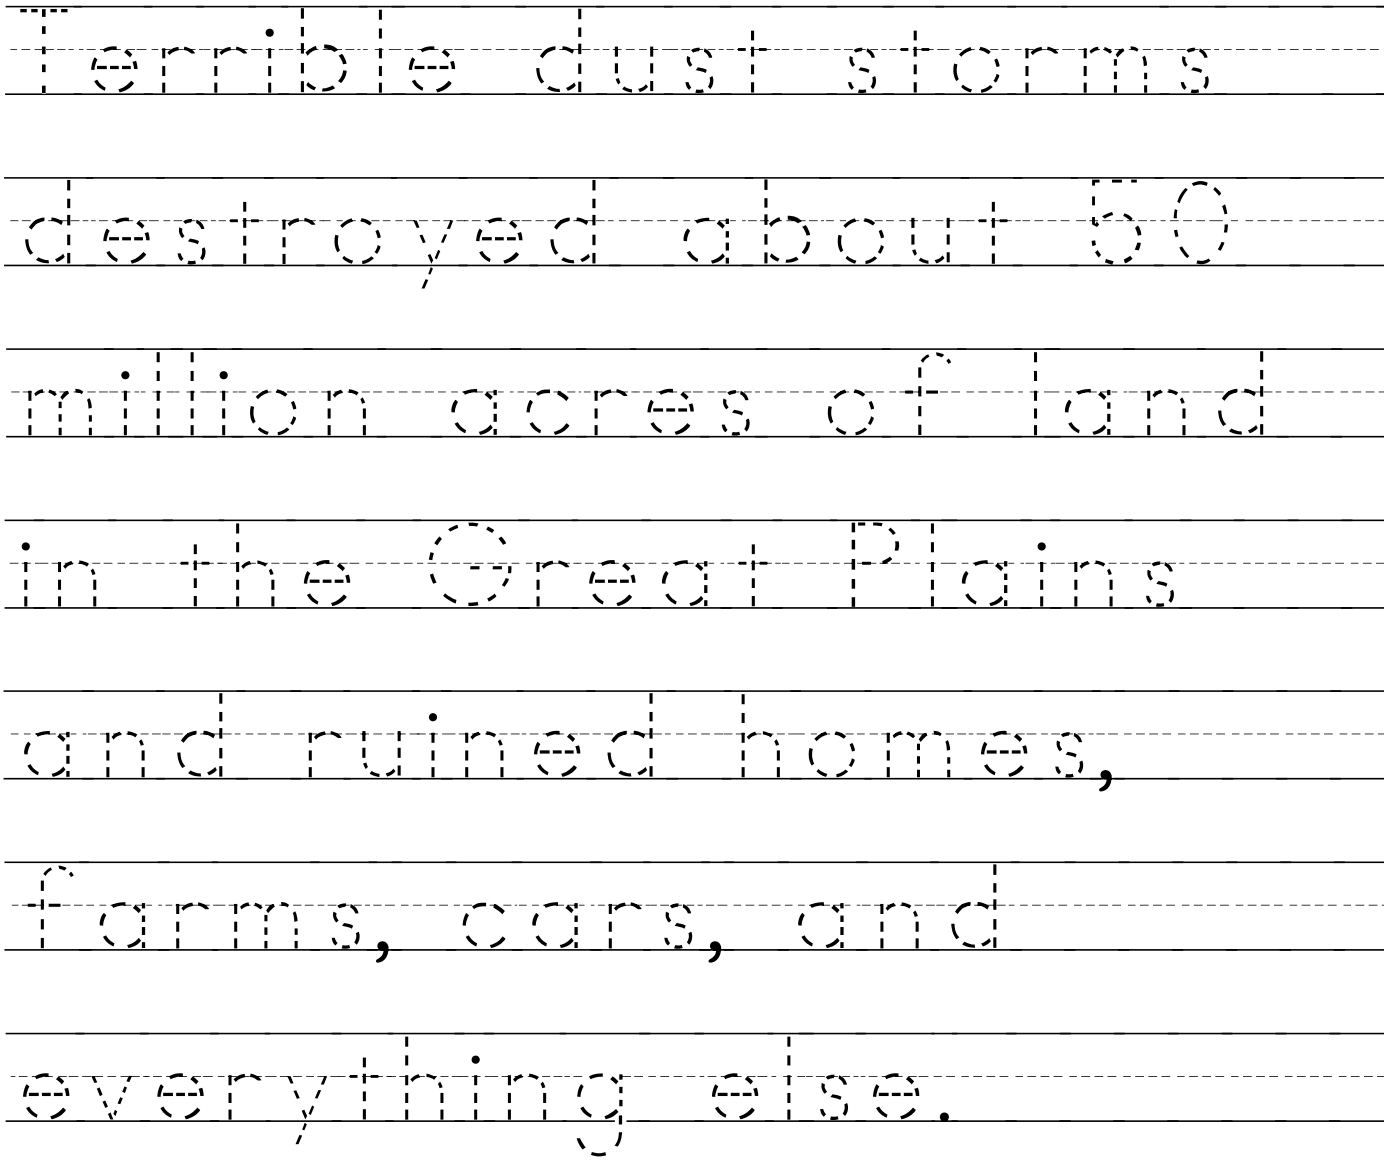
People in the 1800s

©Bonnie Rose Hudson www.writebonnierose.com

In the 1950s, dancers cut the rug and had fun with the jitterbug, you could order a black cow (root beer float) from a soda jerk at the soda fountain, or ride on a cannon ball (fast train).



Closed bank



©Bonnie Rose Hudson www.writebonnierose.com

Jesse Owens

©Bonnie Rose Hudson www.writebonnierose.com

and the Hoover Dam

on the border

between Arizona and

Nevada in 1935.

People in the Photos

©Bonnie Rose Hudson www.writebonnierose.com

In the 40s, girls

wore pop over dresses

and playsuits to save

fabric needed for the war and wore

bobby socks instead of stockings. Boys

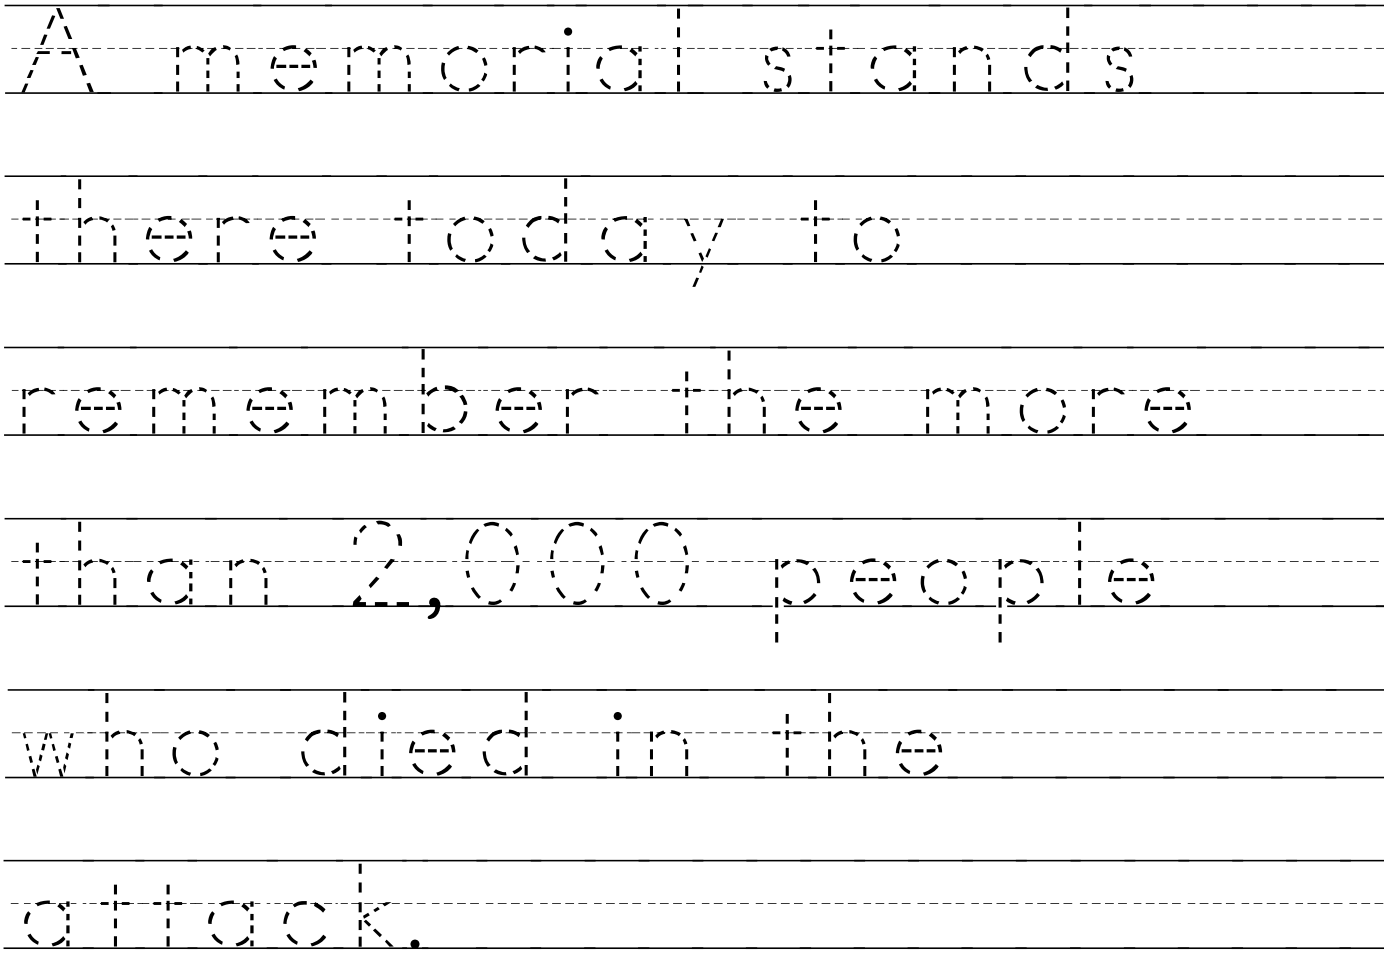
wore Eisenhower

jackets and sloppy

joes.



A memorial stands
there today to remember the more than 2,000 people who died in the attack.

field hospital

Nat King Cole